COLLEGE COMMENCEMENTS.

Presentation Week at Vale College.
This week will be a very lively and interesting one to be subdents of Yale and their friends. The programme

In the morning the seniors will assemble in College chapel, and, after being presented as candidates for graduation, will listen to an oration from Mr. George Colt, of Pomfret, Class Grator, and a poem by Mr. James Brand, of Maine. In the afternoon they will again assemble under the clims on the college green to enjoy the hast social gathering of their student life. Here they will listen to letters from those who have left them earlier in their college course and annoke the long clay pipes and make the air ring with the delightful college sengs, and later in the afternoon they will shake each other's hands and say that dear but painful word "farewell." Then they will march for the last time as a class through the college buildings, and plant the ivy near Alumni Hall. When this is finished they march to the chapel and attend prayer, and their student life is over. In the evening the new made Sophomores will celebrate their second step in college life by holding a pow-wow on the green.

The anniversary of the Newton (Mass.) Theological In-titution occurs this week. Tuesday afternoon Rev. Wm. amson, D. D., of Brookline, will address the Society of Alumni, and on Tuesday evening Rev. Thomas Armitage, D. D., of New York, is to address the Society of Mis-sionary Inquiry. The graduating exercises take place on Wednesday.

A stranger was arrested here this afternoon and is now in confinement on supplicion that he was concerned in the Bowdoinham bank robbery. He can give no satisfactory account of himself. A large number of the citizens are making diligent search after the bank robbery. Several persons have been arrested on suspicion of being engaged in the Bowdoinham Bank robbery, but most of them discharged. Hundreds of detectives and officers are scouring the country in all directions. Only sixteen cents are left in the bank at the present time. The bills of the bank are secured by deposits at Washington.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.
PHILADELPHIA, June 23, 1886.

I notice with much satisfaction the comments of your financial editor upon the national bank currency. I do hope he will continue to show this subject up frequently in its true light to the public. I do not believe our great banks in the cities of Philadelphia and New York are much benfitted by the circulation of their own national are much benfited by the circulation of their own national bank notes, and would not oppose the repeal of that part of the National Bank act authorizing the issue of notes; but the interior banks can flood the cities and the country with their issues and keep them out at the cost of the government for a very long period, ewing to the difficulty in the way of their holders sending them back for redemption. It is the worst piece of financiering the world ever saw for our government to pay twenty millions per annum in gold on bonds representing a currency bearing no interest. The whole thing should be stopped at once and forever. Nobody wants any better currency than United States legal tender notes, and Congress should not adjourn without providing for an issue of legal tenders sufficient to redeem all the bonds now in the Currency Bireau held as security for the national bank note currency. The exchange can be effected without the least disturbence of the financial condition of the country, and would injure no one, but would save without the least disturbance of the financial condition of the country, and would injure no one, but would save twenty millions of burthen to our over-taxed people; besides reducing the principal of the national debt about $334,000,000 by one stroke of sound financial policy.
